Hadewych Minis

"Life's too short not to make the most of it. When I asked myself if I had done everything I had ever wanted to do, I couldn't answer with a convincing 'YES'. I had in fact always dreamed of making something that was completely my own, without anything I could hide behind – something that wasn't in service of a director or producer. My wish was to make an album. As the English poet and playwright Robert Browning once said: 'A man's reach should exceed his grasp or what's a heaven for?'"

Hadewych's desire to make an album grew and grew. And it finally became so big that the singer-songwriter/bassist/actress finally decided to resist no longer. The result, Hadewych Minis, is a collection of pop, punk and funk, complete with samples. or 'electro-ponk', as she likes to call her music.

Hadewych taught herself to pl...
