"The reason I decided to stay in Holland after my studies – piano at the Rotterdam Conservatory (2009) and the Amsterdam Conservatory (2011) – was because, in my opinion, it's one of the countries that generates the highest level of jazz music in Europe.

During my stay in Holland I've had the pleasure to work with some of the most well-known musicians around. This way I became a tiny part of the Dutch jazz scene. It's what I like being: a professional jazz musician who plays here and there with different people. However, as with many other artists, I also feel the necessity to create my own music and have my own projects.

I come from Madrid, a multicultural city full of many different types of music. Madrid has plenty of immigrants coming from Latin America (Venezuela, Puerto Rico, but mostly Cuba). This generated a huge ...
